the many faces

Central is a panorama of ever changing faces, and it is the goal of the Scarlet '67 to capture a few of these faces. The face of despair—a student who is convinced that he cannot pass, the cheerleader who realizes that this game is forever lost. The face of happiness—the athlete who scored the winning point, or perhaps just another student who finally hears that three o'clock bell.

We invite you to take a look then, at the many faces of Central as seen through the eyes of the Scarlet '67.

wisdom . . . integrity . . . ideals

... ethics ...

Mrs. Gates teaches so much more than Latin. Wisdom . . . integrity . . . ideals . . . ethics . . . she teaches a respect for all these things not only to her Latin students, but inevitably, to all students who know her. Whether talking animatedly before homeroom, exchanging ideas in class, or conversing quietly while descending the stairs at the end of a rewarding day, Mrs. Gates is constantly giving of herself. Moments stolen from her own spare time and given to students are beyond counting; it is pointless to try to remember how many afternoons have been taken and spent on her would-be Latin scholars.

Centralites know Mrs. Gates as a vivid woman who imparts much of her own enthusiasm and love for life to her subject. A good teacher teaches his subject well, but an excellent does more than this; an excellent teacher speaks directly to each student. Such a teacher is Mrs. Gates; it is a privilege and a joy to dedicate our yearbook to her.

administrators plan for future

Looking toward the future, Mr. Kidd and Mr. Berry see weighted letter grading for all students next year at Central. In addition, plans are being made for further enlargement of the library and remodeling of the physics lecture room into a multi-purpose room with a stage and closed circuit television. Mr. Haws and Mr. Lewis are looking ahead, too. Mr. Haws has visited several comprehensive schools throughout the country in an effort to learn of new developments in technical programs.

When not at work, all four administrators find time for many hobbies. Mr. Kidd is a camping and boating enthusiast, Mr. Berry plays the bagpipes, Mr. Haws likes to hunt, and Mr. Lewis is an active supporter of Kiwanis.

center offers varied facilities

Over 1600 students seek guidance, advice, and ideas for the future in Central's modern counseling center. Mr. Anderson, Miss Madden, and our new counselor Mr. Gehm, attend to the welfare of the academic and business students while veteran Mr. Finnegan, here for his seventh year, advises the Tech. students.

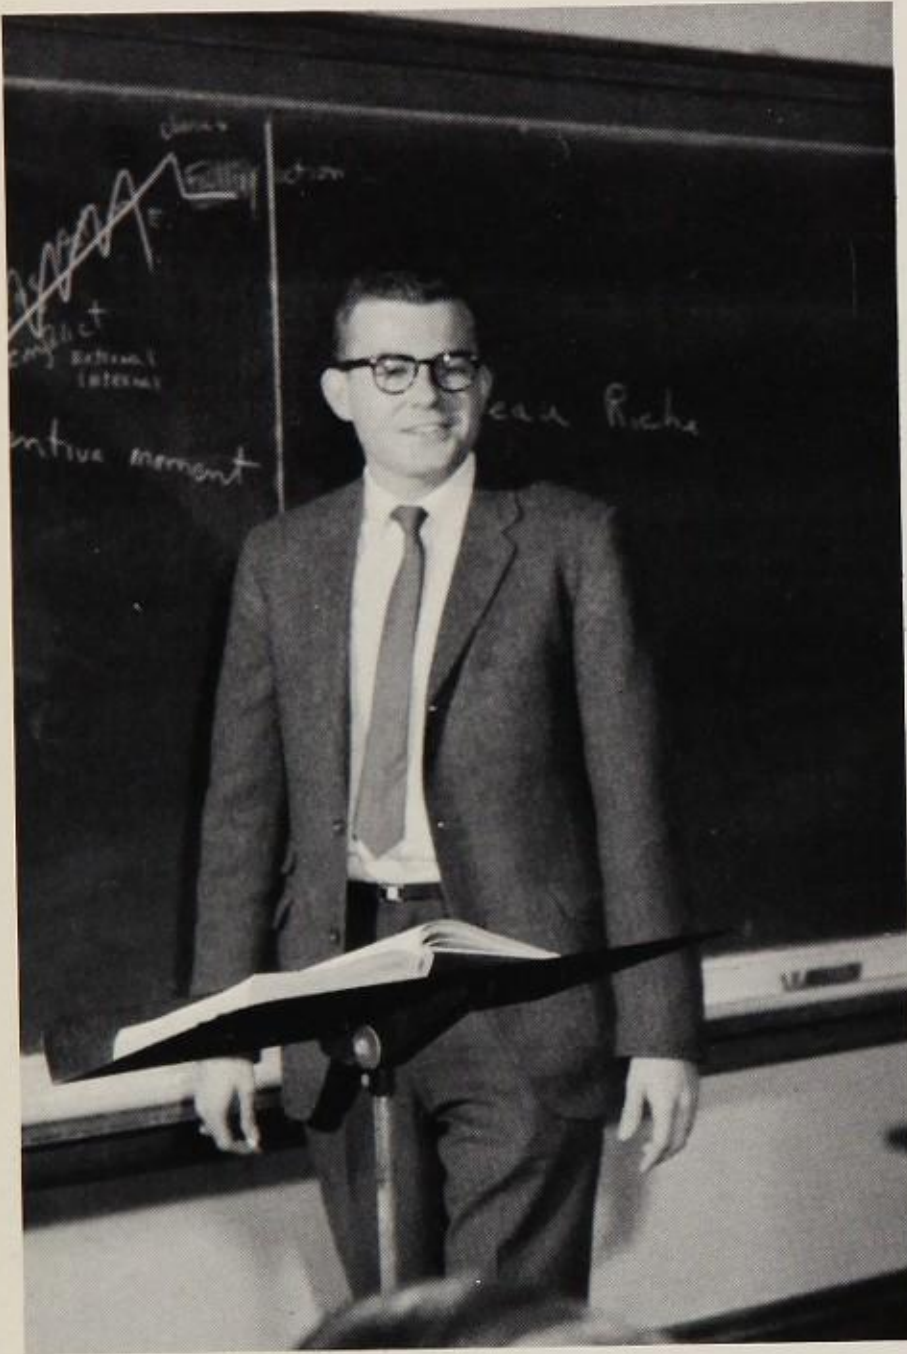

'66 has seen the initiation of informal group counseling which has proved enlightening to participants in experimental group discussions. In addition, the guidance center provides occupational and college pamphlets as well as taped lectures given by college representatives.

new english courses offered

This year, the English department offers two new communication courses. These courses, taught by Mrs. Barbara Morrison and Mrs. Elizabeth Botteron, are being tried at Central as part of a city-wide program. In addition, a one-semester reading and study skills course is being inaugurated this year. Designed for college bound students, the purpose of this course is to improve reading speed and comprehension skills.

languages use oral-aural

French, Spanish, and Russian, the modern languages at Central, emphasize the importance of speaking and listening, using the oral-aural method. The introductory years are spent repeating phrases and dialogues in order to perfect pronunciation. To this end, the language laboratory and tapes provide a rare opportunity to hear native speakers. The following years are spent learning grammar, reading literature, and exploring the culture of countries. It is interesting to note that Central offers the only Russian course in the city. Two graduates have already returned to practice teaching with Mrs. Valija Priedite's classes, and it is likely that the three other high schools in the city will eventually benefit from this new enthusiasm, originally projected from Central.

new approach

'66 has brought a new look to CT's science department. Central is one of only 51 schools in the state using a new uniform approach to earth science. In chemistry, a new method called Chem-Study is used to teach chemical bonding theory to classes. Underlying learning involved in all of Central's science courses is the use of the induction principle. Instead of learning random facts by memory, students are taught lab techniques to learn things for themselves. This method makes facts easier to remember and easier to apply in advanced work, and gives a student a sense of accomplishment he cannot gain by simply watching a teacher.

The math department, headed by Mr. Robert Kraushaar, is constantly revising its curriculum and updating its terminology. A new course, integrating advanced algebra with computer math, is being taught by Miss Mary Fiumano. The course is designed to put higher math to use. Mr. Robert Anderson and Mr. Kraushaar also teach another advanced math course: 12x. Students who enjoy 12x continue into a calculus course for which they may receive college credit.

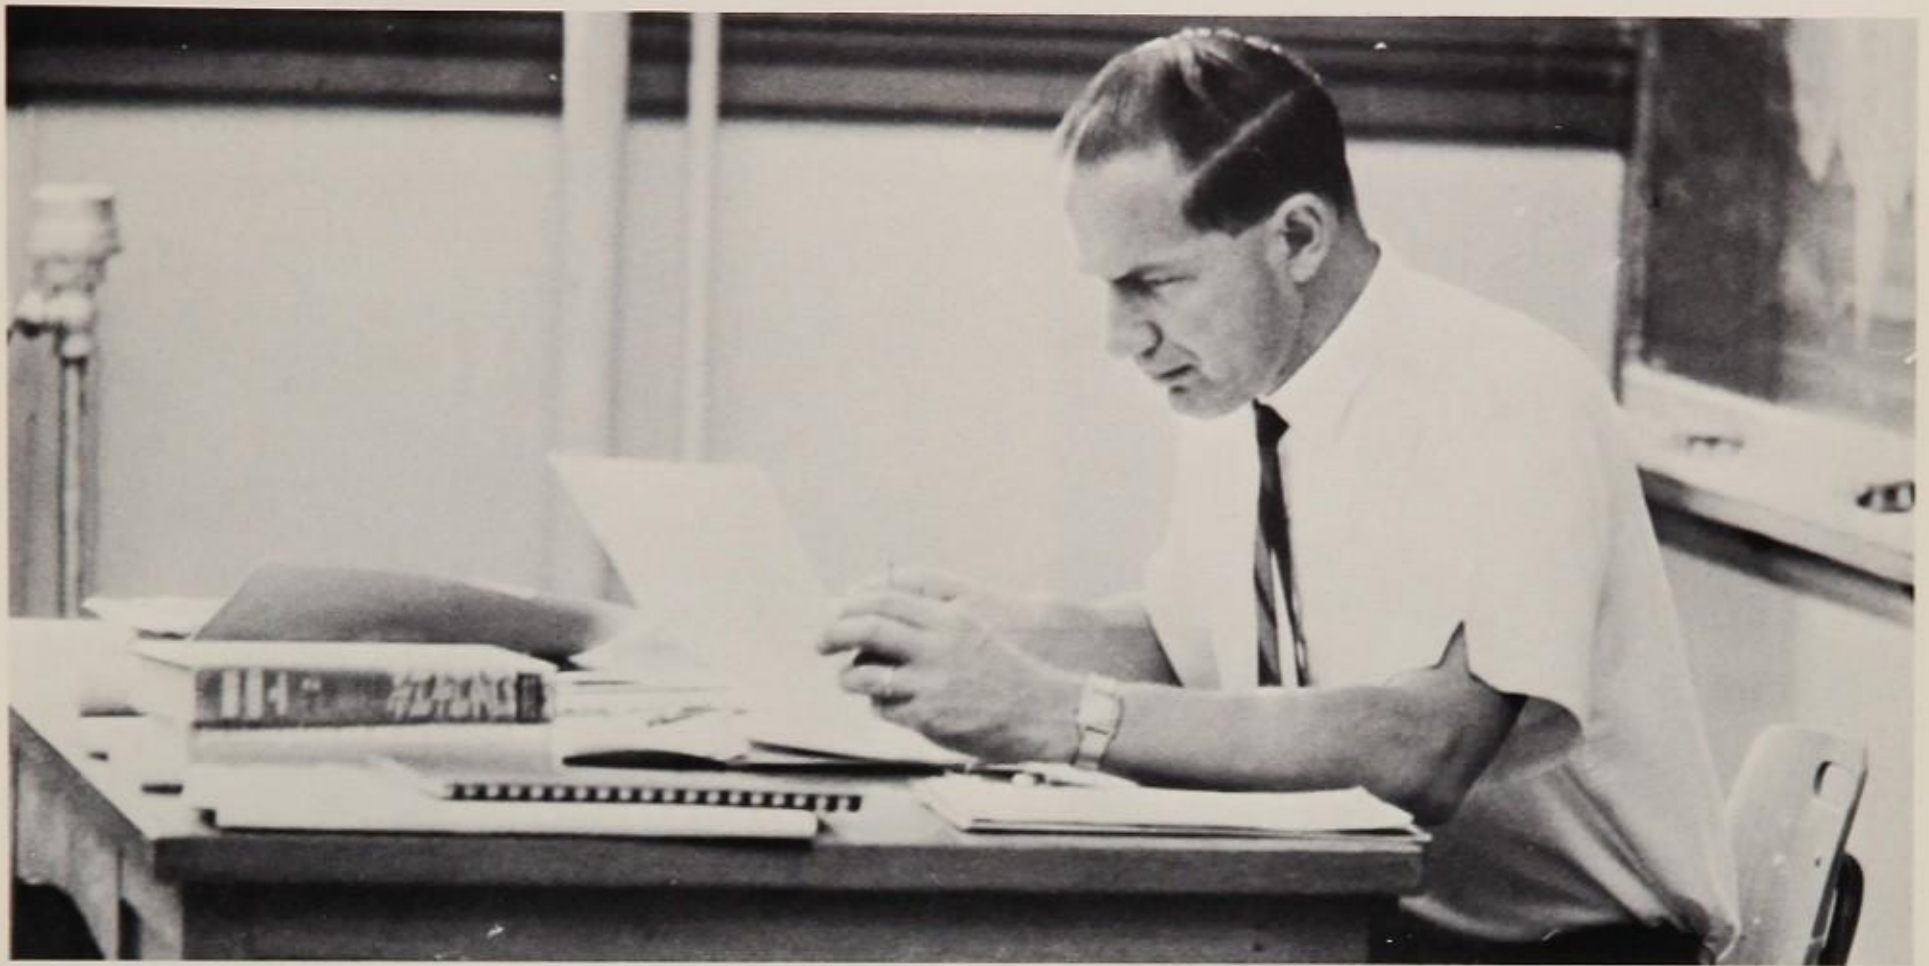

In addition to the regular curriculum, several math students from Central entered the Math Symposium this year. Students from all over the Syracuse area compete in this symposium by presenting exhibits or delivering speeches pertaining to any field of mathematics.

There are few other schools which can serve the purpose of education more completely than Central Tech. It used to offer strictly academic subjects, but this has changed radically. Today the technical and industrial program consists of four courses (computer, chemistry, electronics, and mechanics) and vocational subjects (welding, machine shop, sheet metal-air conditioning, auto mechanics, printing, photography, drafting, electronics servicing, food administration, nursing, retailing, fashion design, and cosmetology). The technical courses generally prepare the student for college, or for industry if he so chooses. Upon the completion of the vocational subjects, the student is prepared for advanced training or employment in industry.

There are few other schools which a pupil may attend and perhaps do all day what he most enjoys doing. By working now in high school with the course that suits his individual wants and needs best, a pupil gets a real headstart on his future. He will enter college better prepared than the average student; he will enter the industrial world better prepared than the average trainee.

in today's world

Whether working in a completely outfitted chemistry lab or one of the modern kitchens of Food Administration, students may be found exploring a wide range of interests and utilizing a wide range of equipment. The technical division boasts no marbled halls or time honored traditions; it boasts only the finest faculty and facilities in Central New York for technical and vocational training on the high school level. With a solid four years' background in a specialized area, it is only logical that the student who graduates from the technical school at Central will find a special meaning and purpose in his immediate future, and it is this future that the technical program at Central strives to prepare its students for.

Modern equipment ranging from trampolines to bongo boards offers students a unique opportunity to become physically fit. In addition to the regular class program the physical education department sponsors many extra-curricular activities. All in all Central's phys ed teachers are kept busy providing Centralites with a full and well rounded program.

In a world of ever-increasing specialization, Central has its share of specialists. Students' health is cared for by Mrs. Cram, the school nurse, and their reading matter is provided by the librarians, Miss Fitzgerald and Mrs. Mooney.

Mrs. Towner, Mrs. Nesdall, Mr. Rouselle, and Mr. Barker give their very special talents to students enrolled in Special Education. Involved in the new team teaching program is Mr. McQueeny while Mr. Caldiera directs the School to Employment Program. Mr. Blume supervises student attendance, and Mr. Jones is Central's social worker.

The arts are given full attention at Central too—Mrs. Gilmour and Mr. Bishop train Central's potential musicians while Mrs. Nichols gives encouragement to budding artists.

Always ready with anything from paper clips to advice, the office staff plays a vital role at Central. The Tech office is the domain of Mrs. McLean and Mrs. Sullivan, who keep things running smoothly. On the other side of the building, Mrs. Russell, Mrs. Hess, Mrs. McDuffie, and Mrs. Cyr are the efficiency experts. However, our office staff do much more than their regular duties, for countless students have received sympathy and advice in Central's offices.

Mrs. Sullivan and Mrs. McLean follow their daily routine.

Each day, hundreds of hungry Centralites troop up to the third floor for lunch. Thanks to the expert cafeteria staff, they are never disappointed. Hot lunches, sandwiches, and desserts await these students without fail.

Central's maintenance is not an easy task, and the custodial staff deserves credit for doing such a fine job. The Scarlet Staff has a special debt of gratitude to these men who have patiently stood by whenever we needed help, understanding, or a door opened.

Contestants warming up during a preliminary briefing.

Offering moral support to Central's team are Mr. Kidd and loyal Centralites.

Among the contestants on a new weekly television series were three students from Central. Esko Kaseorg, Chuck Miller, and Forrest Rhoads battled C.B.A. and Fayetteville-Manlius on the WNYS premiere of "It's Academic". Begun in 1961, the program originated in Washington, D. C. Since then its fame and popularity has spread and it is now telecast in cities across the nation.

Locally, "It's Academic" features high school students from Syracuse and Central New York. Contestants are first nominated by their high schools and then the final selection is made at a question-and-answer session supervised by WNYS-TV. Three schools compete on the program each week with three students from each school comprising the separate teams. Questions are asked concerning math, science, English, and general knowledge and the team scoring the most points wins 54 volumes of the Great Books of the Western World for its school.

Although the Central team was defeated, they did a good job, and certainly the three team members will never forget their television debut.

double the luck for central

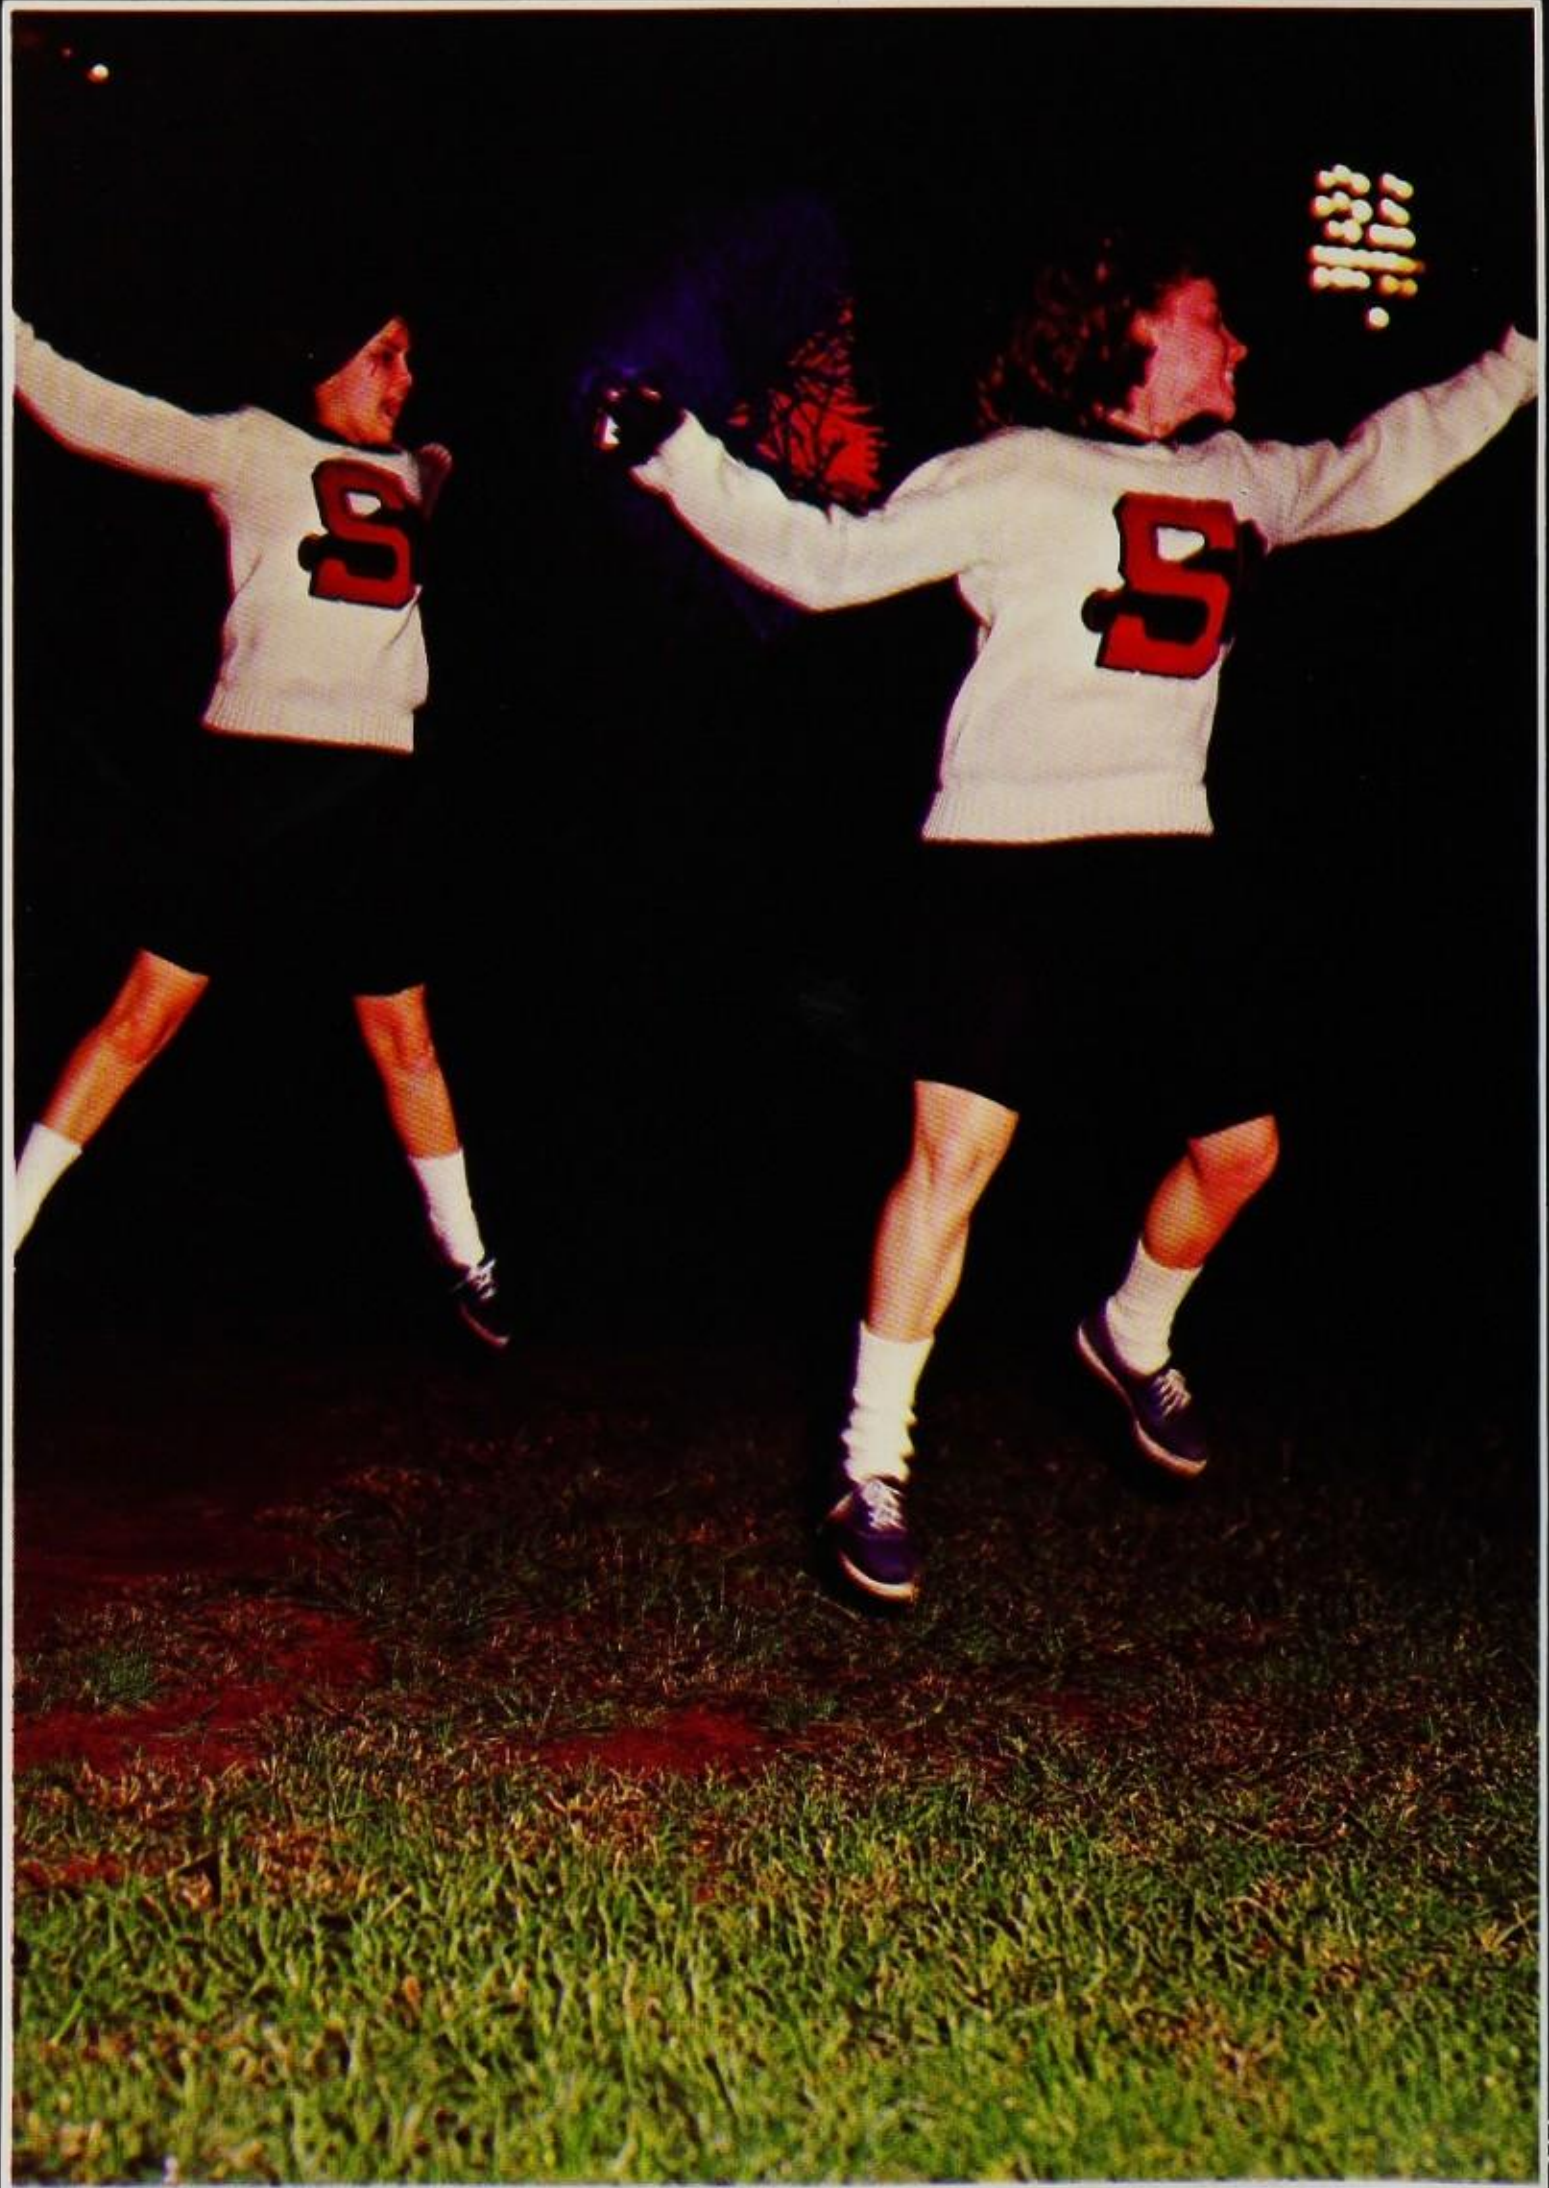

Entertainment at the joint language Christmas party is supplied by Thilo Burdach and Mike Miller.

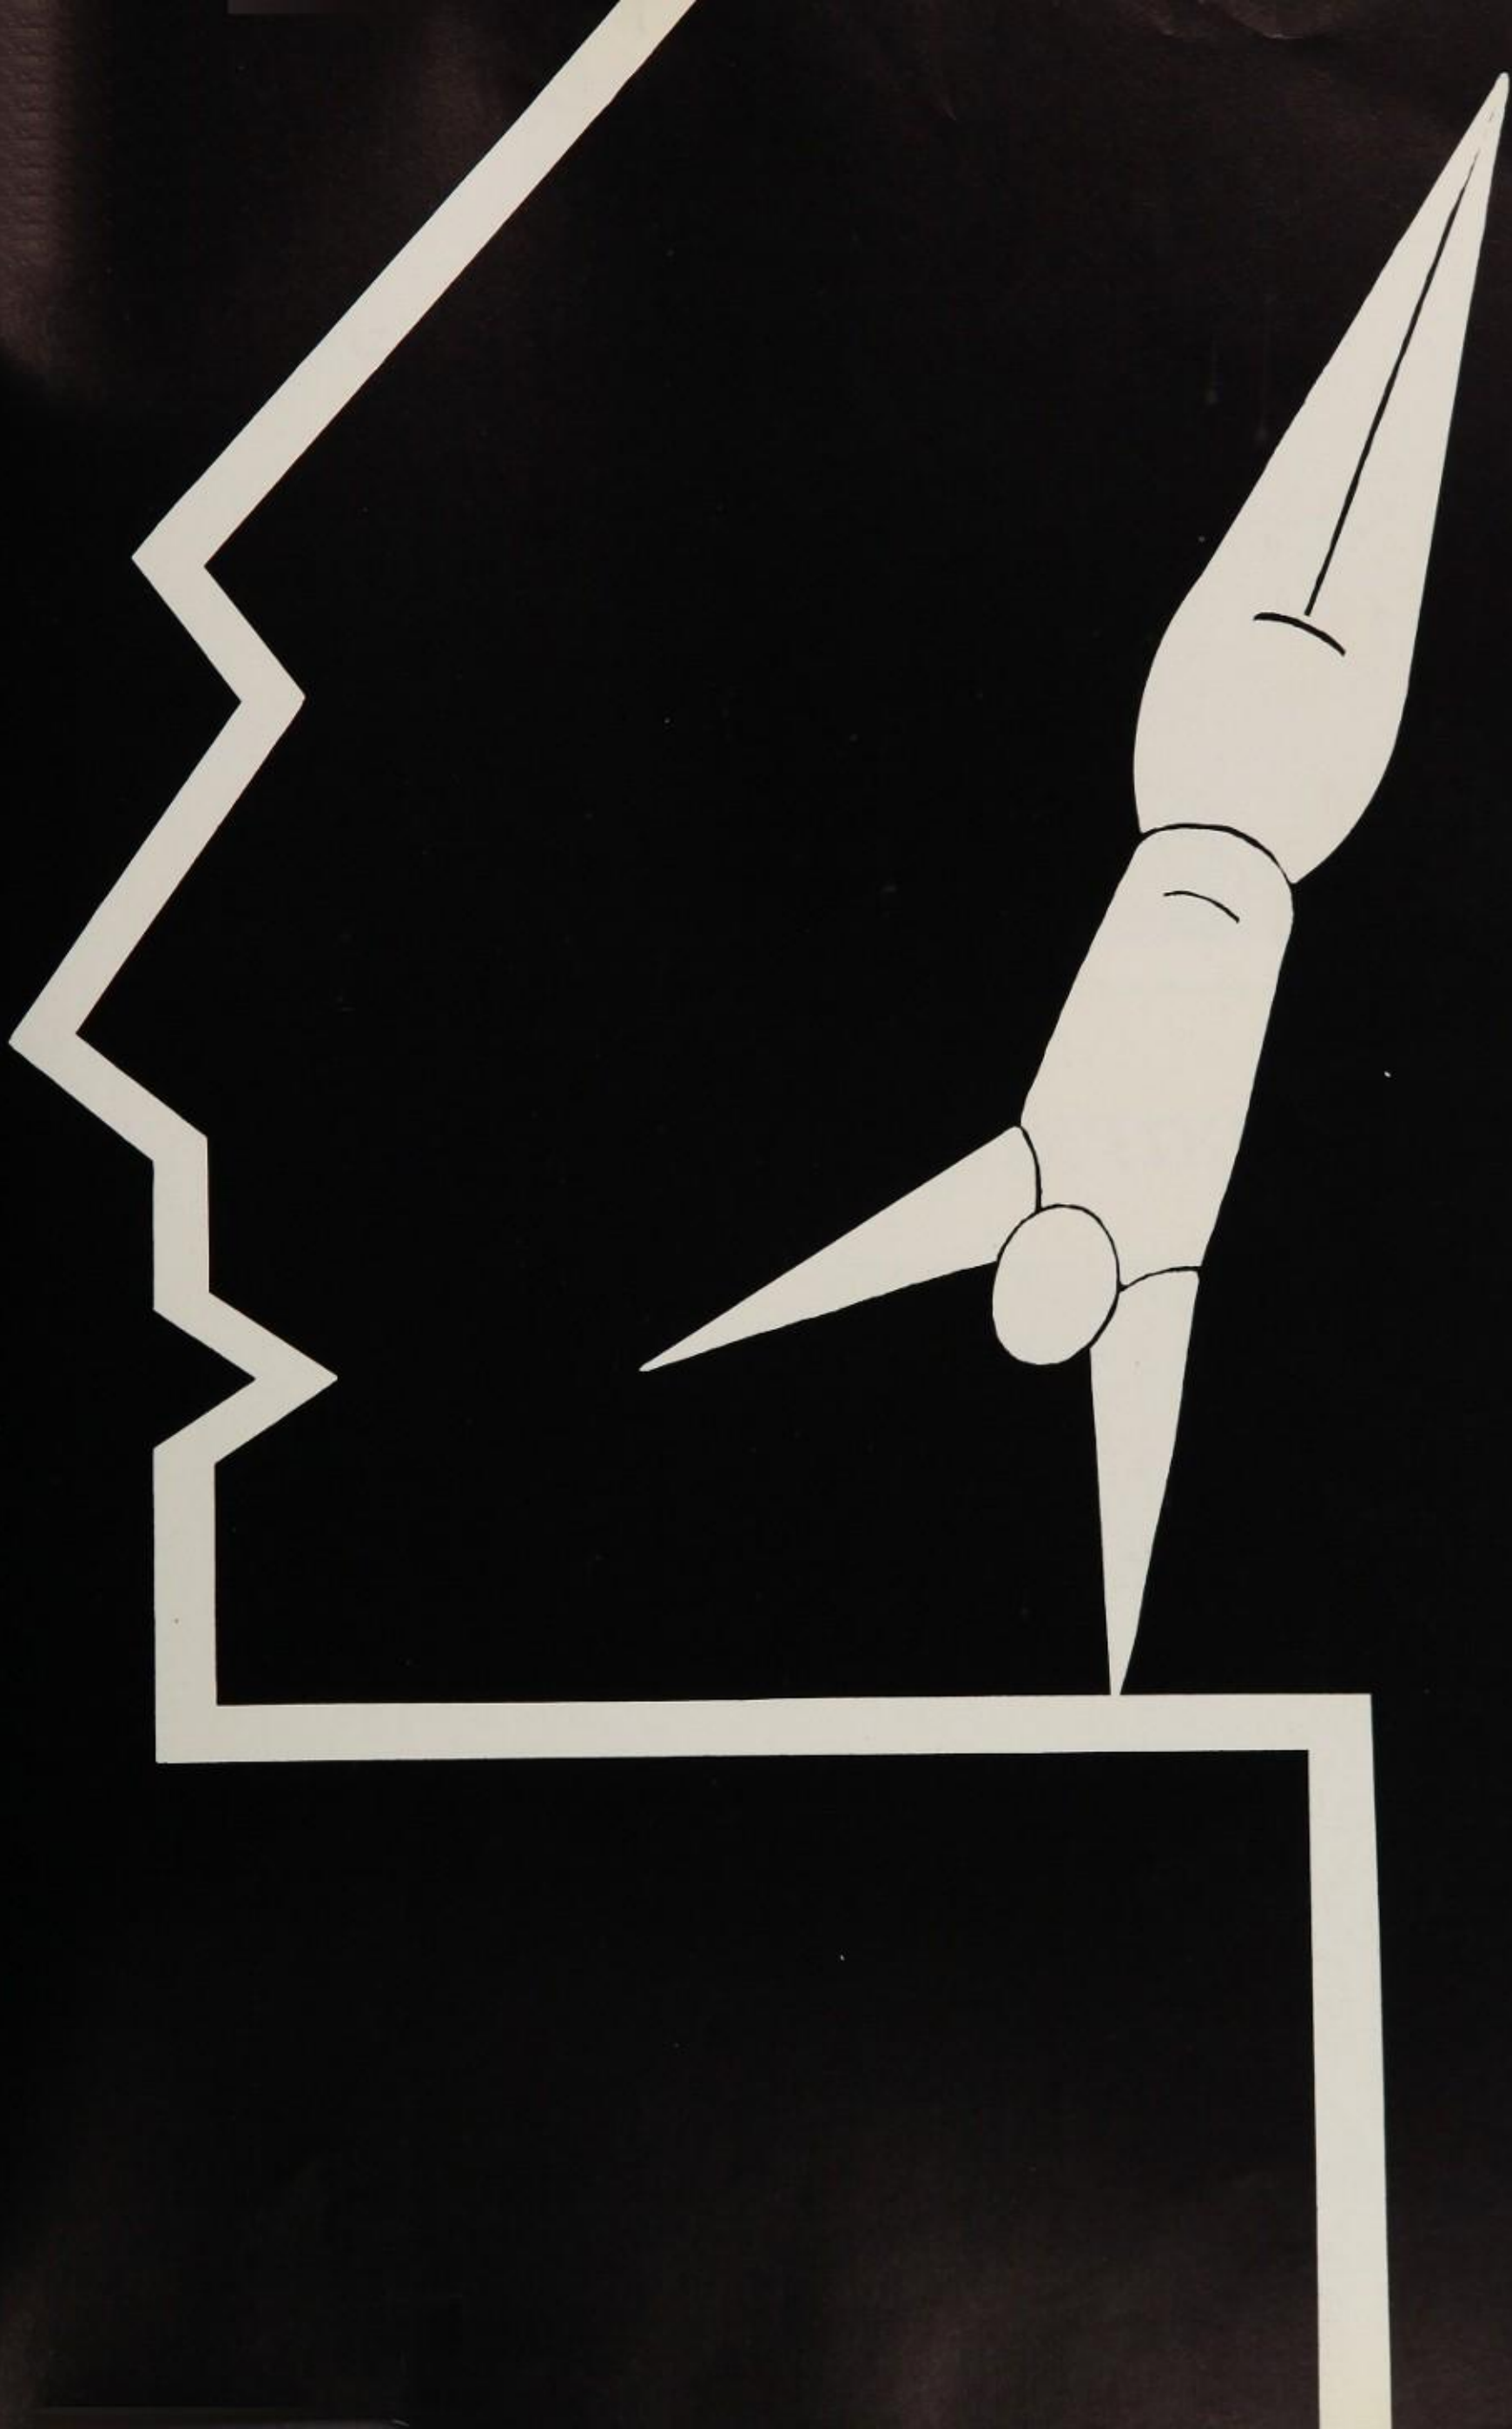

1967 has been a bonus year for Central. For the first time ever Central has hosted two AFS students. And it has been the aim of C.T.'s AFS Committee to provide an exciting year for Meera Krishnaswamy from India and Thilo Burdach from Germany. Headed by Mr. Alfred Lewis, the committee began early in September '66, by having Meera and Thilo and their host families, the Markarians and the Millers, get acquainted with some Central students at a picnic at Clark Reservation.

Once the school year was underway, Meera and Thilo met with other AFS students in the area. Plans were made for them to attend an AFS Christmas party with other AFS students and AFS alumnae. Later, Meera and Thilo visited Syracuse University for an informative tour.

To enable urban students to taste suburban life, and vice-versa, AFS has exchange weeks, during which Meera and Thilo stayed in Weedsport and Phoenix, respectively. Oswego reciprocated by sending a student to stay with the Davis family while attending school at Central.

Central's tennis team finished the season with a fantastic record of five wins and only one loss. They won the Central New York Cities Championship, plus the singles title through Tim LaBoria and the doubles title through George Jaremko and Ed Bolen. Our team of nine players had a fine season, and we look forward to another great one for the new school year.

Coached by Mr. Kenneth Beagle, this year's baseball team did their best to overcome some bad breaks and formidable opponents. They finished the season defeated, but they played hard and well, and Centralites have no regrets.

Among the activities offered to the boys at Central, track is one of the most demanding yet popular sports. It takes guts and determination to run, and long hours after school are devoted to just that. A dedicated track man can run throughout the school year, beginning in the fall with training for Cross Country, and running right on into the winter with Outdoor track and then into Spring with Indoor track.

Last year's track team placed third in city competition. Our team, coached by Mr. Edwin Lukens, showed a lot of promise and drive, and we look forward to seeing track continue at Central as a really great sport.

wrestling on the rise at central

A new sport at Central, wrestling has grown in popularity during the past season. With a new coach, Mr. Jack Weaver, this year's team has made great strides. Hard work and determination are necessary qualities for a good wrestler. Frequently team members can be seen after school doggedly running the halls in preparation for an upcoming match. Weight classes range from 95 lbs. to 180+ lbs.

A wrestling match consists of eleven individual matches. The objective of each man is to pin his opponent thereby scoring five points for his team. If a grappler is unable to accomplish this the match is ended by a decision based on the number of points earned during the match. Matches can also be won by forfeit, draw, and default.

Becoming a master gymnast is not an easy task, and any one of the members of the gymnastics team will tell you that it takes hard work and determination to perfect a difficult routine on any one piece of apparatus. Precision in rhythm and timing, a perfect sense of balance, and lots of sheer endurance are only the basics—long hours after school devoted to grueling yet necessary workouts put our gymnastics team at the top.

Cleve Hughes clings to loose ball.

During the basketball season, all Centralites become avid sports spectators. This year, which is Coach Johnstone's second with our Lancers, has seen our basketball team rise to the top. Central gave the toughest league contenders Bishop Ludden and Corcoran a run for their money, handing Corcoran their first defeat in two years and exhibiting a fine performance at all the other games, too.

The 1967 basketball season saw many players rise from the ranks and lead our team to victory. Roy Neal, a junior, averaged 20 points per game, besides being a top rebounder. Seniors Jerry Dunham and Al Bullock were fine back-up men. Cleve Hughes, a sophomore, shows fine promise for another great team next year, although the perfect coordination and poise of this year's team will be hard to beat. The entire team gave us one of the "winningest" seasons ever . . . and we look forward to an equally great record for '68.

Junior Class Officers seem ready for action—Ellen Pond—Secretary, Dick Gerbino—President, Debbie Retschle—Treasurer, Tom Moskal—Vice President

Each spring, the students at Central nominate and elect the officers for the next year's student government. The student government, or student council, is served by representatives elected from the classes-at-large and from the individual class councils. This year's council has actively promoted AFS through candy sales, and is building the treasury for student dances and other activities.

The freshman, sophomore, and junior class officers are the basis of an eventual turnover in leadership at Central. The importance of the underclass officers is emphasized by their hard work and efficient efforts.

The overall picture of government at Central is seen through the eyes of the Board of Elections, which runs the various campaigns. Although they receive little glory, they are the backbone of student government at Central.

recorder tells the story

The Recorder, advised by Mr. James Quinn, has been in existence for over one hundred years. There are editors of each page and special area of the paper; editorial, Cheryl Colang; news, Leslie Bernet; feature, Kathleen Mullin; sports, Joe Bovenzi; art, Billie Burke and Tim Smarzo; advertising, Gaylord Masson; and exchange, Nadine Alibrandi. With help from the Editor-in-chief, Beth Hansen, the Assistant-to-the-Editor, Pat Phillips, and Managing Editor, Mark Steinwinter, each editor lays out his own page.

With an issue every month, the editors must find news, sports and feature stories and ideas for editorials at least three to four weeks before the paper comes out. Stories are assigned to reporters, turned in within the week, and typed by Ruth Shuart and Judi Burke. Pictures are taken by Robert Works, Chris Cummings, James Burns and Ronald Kagen. Finally, however, all of this preparation proves worthwhile when approximately 400 copies of the Recorder are sold.

A stranger at Central wanders into a room on the first floor and is puzzled by what he sees—desks and floor are covered with papers, books, coats, pencils, rulers, carbon paper, shoes . . . And then there are the people in the room. Five noisy people (judging by the uproar there must be more than five, but our observer doesn't see anymore) are talking, measuring, typing, erasing . . .

Our intruder glances at the clock, "Isn't eight o'clock a little late to still be in school?" he demands.

A boy turns from his typewriter and answers cheerfully, "We're working on our yearbook, sir" while a girl with a glazed expression mutters something about a deadline.

"Crazy kids", the man mutters as he walks away.

This man has caught only a glimpse of the ingredients which made the Scarlet '67. In an attempt to give the Scarlet a new look, the staff decided to break all old traditions. However, changes such as colored pictures proved expensive. So, the staff sold ads, candy, and held a carwash to raise the needed funds.

Then, pictures and layouts were planned, and here again, the '67 staff tried to dream up some new ideas. And again change created problems. It may have seemed like a great idea to take a picture of two seniors on a Yamaha, but there were at least two staffers who would not agree. When the Yamaha wouldn't run, they were forced to give it a running push down Warren Street.

However, despite the frustration and confusion, the Scarlet '67 was finally completed and each staff member had gained a memorable experience.

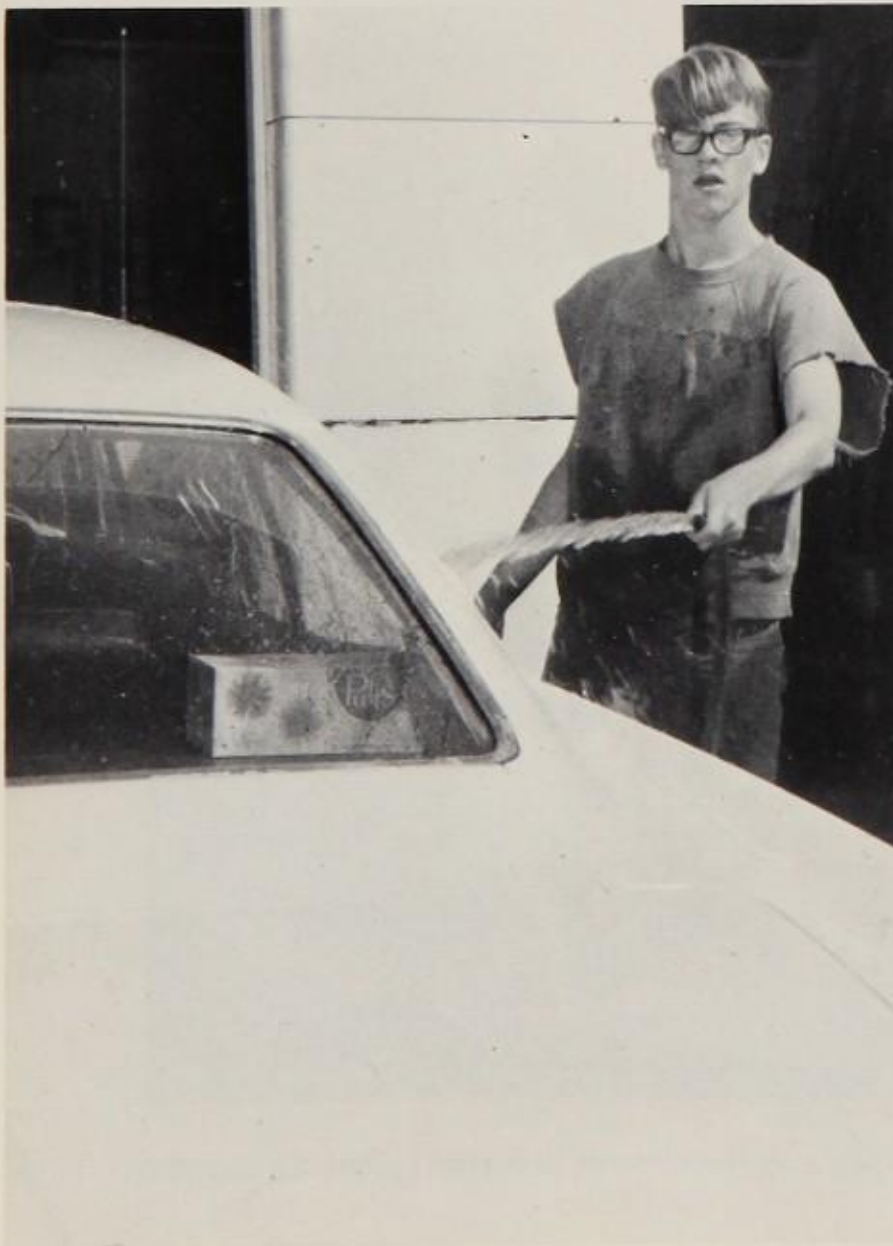

"No, not P-l-m, E-l-n"—Jean DeGrazia, Elnora Breed, and Joan Hanlin give their names to Scarlet typists San Aguayo and Chuck Stathis.

Stan Harwzinske, Barb Brazosky, and Patti Hale discuss that missing picture.

Following last year's championship team, this year's team has its work cut out for it. Competing against seven other area high schools, the object of the team is to correctly answer questions concerning news of the past week.

Celebrating its tenth year of existence, Central's chapter of the National Honor Society, took part in the District Ten Conference. In addition, members posted the grad-about board and the "Calendar of the Month".

Members of Future Unlimited were kept busy this year selling dam dolls as well as touring many local businesses. Red Cross members, on the other hand, spent their time making tray favors for nursing homes as well as conducting the school collection for the United Fund drive.

This year for the first time, the French Club has operated under a constitution formulated in French. Meetings are conducted in French, and the enthusiastic members even prepare a different French food for each meeting.

Thirteen countries are represented in IRC, including Meera Krishnaswamy, our exchange student from India, and Thilo Burdach, our exchange student from Germany. IRC strives to better understanding between countries.

An intricate South American dance is performed by P. Gutierrez

This year's Russian Club has been very active both inside and outside of school. The members participated in a joint Christmas party with the French, Spanish, and Latin clubs, with each club performing in its own language. Russian songs were sung and a Ukranian dance was performed. The members sent a Christmas gift to one of our servicemen in Viet Nam, and for Easter planned a party with Russian foods as a highlight. The members meet twice a month, and the meetings are conducted in part in Russian.

Central Tech's Spanish Club is advised by Mrs. Kline, Spanish teacher at Central Tech. With eighteen members, it's as active as ever, and projects enthusiasm into the extracurricular side of life at school. At the all-language club Christmas party, Pedro Gutierrez performed an extremely difficult South American dance as part of their program, and they also contributed to the celebrating by singing Spanish songs. Spanish Club has always been a favorite among all students taking Spanish, and will no doubt continue to be.

Central's A Cappella Choir is one of the most vital organizations in Central. It offers the chance to sing to all of the students, and many of the student body have been active participants since their Freshman year.

Every year, this choir highlights the Christmas program, and the candlelight procession is undoubtedly the main attraction of the concert. The A Cappella Choir also gives a spring concert every year, which winds up their musical year beautifully until the next term, when a new program of music will again captivate audiences.

The Senior Ensemble and the Cantare Chorale are very important in the overall picture of music at Central, but the A Cappella Choir is the mean between the two, and most representative of those who sing at Central.

Directed by Mr. William Bishop, the Band Ensemble meets twice a week. Due to the lack of experienced musicians, it has not been able to perform. However, members are receiving valuable training for the year to come.

The Cantare Chorale was created last year in order to give students who were not members of A Cappella Choir an opportunity to sing. They have sung at our school assemblies and programs, and after gaining performing experience and some musical knowledge, many members are invited to join the A Cappella Choir.

The Senior Chorale Ensemble is a select group of twenty of the best voices from A Cappella Choir. Widely known throughout Syracuse, this select group is often invited to perform for various civic organizations and functions.

This year has seen the innovation of another activity at Central – Ski Club. Advised by Mr. Youmans, its members ski together and work on improving their form. All kinds of skiers are welcomed, including the most inexperienced, so that it promotes an interest in a truly great sport which might otherwise lie dormant.

Pep Club has never been so active or vital than they have been this year. Whether cheering on the football team, publicizing a basketball game, or encouraging their favorite teacher to take in a wrestling match, they generate the spirit which is so necessary to the total picture at Central.

Recently organized, Key Club is designed to serve both the school and community. Members have been working hard to raise money for AFS as well as a planned trip to the district convention at Concord.

Among the many activities of the Keyettes was a Christmas party for the kindergarten class at Danforth School. With the help of Mark Steinwinter, who was Santa Claus for the day, the Keyettes gave over fifty little children a very special Christmas present.

Library Club is not a normal, once-a-week, after-school-meeting type of organization. It is merely a group of students who devote their study halls or free periods to working in the library. Chances are that some of these members never see each other until they meet for the yearbook picture. The jobs done by these students are often small, but if done by the librarian, she would not be available to help other students with tricky research problems. Working in the library helps the student too—each library club member is well versed in useful library skills.

Central Chess Club members are interested in improving their skills and learning the various tricks of the game, and with the help of their adviser, Mr. James McPherson, they have much improved individual performance.

Mrs. Morrison, advisor to the Drama Club, and its forty active members, devote much of their time to humorous dialogues and monologues. Some of these have been taped and presented to English classes with the object of dramatizing plays and readings.

DECA is the largest club in Central, with a total membership of 103. They have sold cards and candy to finance a trip to a conference at Concord, and have contributed to needy families at Christmas time.

The highlight of the year for Fashion Club members was a trip to New York City. There, the girls visited wholesale and retail areas of fabrics and dress trimmings, Pratt Institute and Fashion Institute High School of Fashion Industry and such shops as Bonwit Tellers. Members worked hard to earn the money for this luxury weekend, they held a bake sale a candy sale and a car wash.

A field trip to Bristol Lab was a major event this year for the Future Nurses. The year will be ended with the annual picnic. Future Cosmetologists had a busy year too. Among their achievements was their participation in the annual exhibit at the War Memorial.

One of the most important aspects of high school education is the readying of students for the future. At Central there is a strong emphasis on this, which shines forth in the enthusiasm with which the pupils at Central support the "Future" clubs.

A smoothly run home is the object of the members of Future Homemakers. This goal will eventually be realized with the practical application of knowledge gained in Tech.

FTA members have had many luncheons with distinguished speakers, made a field trip to Utica College, and attended classes at SU, all with the object of better understanding teaching as a profession. Through activities like this, youth are seriously motivated to consider teaching as a career.

Secretarial skills are bettered through the cooperation of members of FSA with their sponsors, the National Secretaries' Association. Through workshops and days spent in actual training in an office, FSA accomplishes their goal of excellence as secretaries.

Meeting monthly, the Society of Technical Designers practices drafting and mechanics' skills with the aid of Tech. facilities.

Because visual aids have become increasingly significant by offering a new dimension to education, the Projectionist's Club is important to both students and faculty.

we would like to thank

—Mr. Hunt, who took pictures at dawn, took pictures at night, took pictures in the rain, took pictures on roofs . . .

—Mr. and Mrs. Grossman and everyone at Vardens.

—Dr. and Mrs. Hale for giving us a home away from 134.

—Empire Magazine of the Sunday Herald American for lending us the pictures of Karen Shickel on pages 42 and 43.

—Mr. Gallinger for answering our numerous questions.

—The faculty and administration for their tolerance and patience.

—Above all, the students and teachers at Central who were, after all, the subjects of the Scarlet '67.
